No Jeweled Beauty is my Love.

BY GERALD MASSEY.

No jewelled beauty is my love;
Yet in her earnest face
There's such a world of tenderness
She needs no other grace.
Her smiles and voice around my life
In light and music twine;
And dear, O very dear to me
Is this sweet love of mine!

O joy! to know there's one fond heart
Beats ever true to me;
It sets mine leaping like a lyre,
In sweetest melody.
My soul uprears a deity,
To hear her voice divine;
And dear, O very dear to me
Is this sweet love of mine!

If ever I have sighed for wealth,
'Twas all for her, I trow;
And if I win Fame's victor-wreath,
I'll twine it on her brow.
There may be forms more beautiful,
And souls of sunnier shine,
But none, O none, so dear to me
As this sweet love of mine!

The First Seven Presidents of the United States.

It is a somewhat singular fact that the present American Government—if we may properly use that word "present," to distinguish that founded by Washington and his associates—was adopted just one hundred years after the present English monarchy was put in operation by the great revolution which placed William of Orange on the throne in 1689. A new era commenced in Great Britain at that time, as it did in the United States under the Federal Constitution. Of these seventeen, seven may be said to be identical with or had recollections that associated them with the war of the American Revolution. Those seven were Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson. With the retirement of the latter to the Hermitage, in 1837, sixty-two years after the commencement of the struggle at Lexington, the roll of Revolutionary Presidents closed. Of these seven Presidents, five were active participants in the days of their manhood, and the other two, the younger Adams and General Jackson in the time of their boyhood. Washington had led the Revolutionary army during the war; Adams and Jefferson had been among the most prominent of the members of the Continental Congress, as well as distinguished as its foreign ministers abroad. Madison and Monroe came also into the revolutionary struggle. The latter was wounded at the battle of Princeton, and the former was in the Continental Congress before the war closed, and was one of its most active members. John Quincy Adams, when a youth, had accompanied his father across the ocean when he sailed on a foreign mission in the service of the Colonies, and had afterwards grown up as an attache of the embassy. Andrew Jackson, when a youth of thirteen or fourteen, had the horrors of war brought home to him in the killing of his elder brother by the British troops, and his own capture and imprisonment in South Carolina by that force.

Of the fifty-six signers of the Declaration of Independence, only two, Adams and Jefferson, became Presidents. One other, Eldridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, became Vice-President, and died while in office, the only instance of that office ever being vacant from that hour.

But two of the framers of the Constitution became Presidents, viz: Washington and Madison.

Of our seven Revolutionary Presidents, only two of them, John Adams and James Madison, were political speakers or orators. Adams was an eloquent man, and his addresses, according to the testimony of his cotemporaries, who heard them, for we had no reporters in those days, were among the best made in the old Continental Congress. Daniel Webster, in one of his immortal productions, put into the mouth of John Adams, the best and strongest arguments that were urged on the floor of Congress in behalf of the Declaration of Independence. It concluded: "Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, I am for the Declaration!" So characteristic was this address of Adams, that it has almost passed into the public mind as being actually made by him.

Jefferson, the finest writer and the greatest statesman of the Revolutionary era, was no speaker, and we have no recollection of his ever making an impressive address.

Mr. Madison, although not an orator, was a fine and impressive speaker, and upon him was put the task, in the first Congress of the United States, of replying to the Treasury Reports, showing the fallacy of Alexander Hamilton. The race of Revolutionary patriots were not talkers. They acted instead of speaking. Patrick Henry, James Otis, and the two Adamses were the spokesmen of the Revolution. Carlyle could not urge the objection against us then as now, that we are "running to wind and tongue." There was a high degree of aristocratic decorum in the Presidency of these Revolutionary patriots. Under Washington and the elder Adams, the presentation to them partook somewhat of the nature of a court ceremonial, the person presented having to appear in full dress, with a sword by his side, as is now the custom in the monarchies of Europe. Neither Washington nor the elder Adams delivered President's messages, as is the custom, now. On the contrary, they came down to Congress in a chariot, with four or six horses, and made a speech to that body, such as the Queen of England or the Emperor of France now makes. It was Jefferson who first introduced the custom of the written messages.

There was a strange coincidence between the fates and fortunes of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams. The last was eight years older than the first, and came into Congress before him. Jefferson followed him there, and the two were put first and second upon the Committee which drafted the Declaration of Independence. Adams then went to France as the Foreign Minister, to be succeeded in a few years by Jefferson. Adams came home to be Vice-President, in which place he was succeeded by Mr. Jefferson for a successor. Although the leaders of bitterly opposing parties, they were warm personal friends during almost the whole of their career. It was only about the time that Mr. Adams was beaten by Jefferson for President, that they ceased friendly correspondence and relations with each other. They again resumed them, and wrote the most remarkable letters to each other upon history, politics, morals and religion, when they were respectively eighty and ninety years old. Both of them appeared to be strongly skeptical and hetorodox in religion, and of the two, Adams was the most so. Finally, to cap the climax, they both died upon the 4th of July, 1826, just fifty years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, of which, save Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, they were the sole survivors. Among the last words of Adams, then ninety-one years old, were, "Jefferson still survives."

There were some singular points in the career of Mr. Adams. A Federalist at the head of a party which was violently opposed to France, and in favor of a British Alliance, he was yet the only President who, in a President's speech or message, declared his partiality and attachment to the French nation. Washington's Cabinet, which he retained, and Alexander Hamilton's influence, drove the country, under his administration, into hostilities with France. Against their advice and influence, Adams sent a new embassay to France, and made peace with that power. This cost him his re-election as President. There was ever after a bitter feud with Alexander Hamilton. Years after, when the latter was killed in a duel with Aaron Burr, Adams with singular bitterness, said: "It is too bad that we should lose him in that way."

Adams broke with the Federal party in his own State, supporting Jefferson's administration before its close; and by his advice, his son, John Quincy, joined the Democratic party.

General Washington, who, during the earlier years of his administration, held the balance even between the Federalists and Democrats, toward the close of his career became strongly Federal.

His last vote was for Federal candidates for the Legislature in his county, who were beaten, although they had the prestige of his name. For the prominence which he obtained in the Revolution, Washington was indebted to John Adams. It was upon motion of the latter that he was made Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army. Washington was appointed by the Congress at the time. Mr. Adams was governed in his notion by political considerations. It was thought proper that as the war had commenced in the North, the Commander-in-Chief should be taken from the South, in order to unite the whole country heartily in the contest. Washington was possessed of immense wealth, and it was believed that the spectacle of risking it in the contest would have a salutary effect upon the timid and faint-hearted. The Massachusetts Puritan therefore nominated the Virginia cavalier and Church of England man.

Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, three Virginia Presidents, all lived within a few miles of each other, and were often together. They were warm personal as well as political friends. Madison and Monroe did not, however, have that extreme confidence in the people that Jefferson had, and their Democracy was altogether of a more moderate character. As an illustration of that, read the celebrated Kentucky Resolutions of 1798 and 1799, written by Mr. Jefferson, and the Virginia Resolutions in 1798, written by Mr. Madison. They were both upon the same subject, upon which both agreed, and upon which they had a mutual understanding and consultation. The Kentucky Resolutions point clearly to State secession from the Union as a remedy for Federal infractions of the Constitution in the last resort; but the Virginia hint at rather than express it. One was inspired by the vigor and force of Mr. Jefferson; the other embodied the more cautious policy of Mr. Madison. Mr. Monroe, who was a man of moderate talents, had the easiest Presidential term known in our history. There were tremendous political storms before he came in, and violent struggles after he left the Presidential chair; but during the time he occupied it there was a remarkable political quietude. It was the era of good feeling, when "we were all Democrats, or we were all Federalists." We fear no such golden period will ever return in our history.

General Jackson and the younger Mr. Adams were bitter personal as well as political enemies during the most of their career, growing out of the peculiar way in which Adams was elected President over the General in 1824. Jackson had the highest electoral vote, but not a majority over all, there being two other candidates—William H. Crawford and Henry Clay. The House of Representatives had to make the choice between Adams, Jackson and Crawford. Clay was a member of the House from Kentucky, and by his influence that and other States which had voted for him, went for Adams and secured his election. Clay was immediately named by Adams, Secretary of State. It was looked upon by Jackson as a bargain and sale, and he never forgave either of them for it, and could never be convinced of their rectitude and integrity.

With the retirement of Jackson, the curtain fell upon the men of the Revolution, and thenceforward our political leaders were men who had only known it by tradition or read of it in history. From that time our troubles commenced and we found by experience that those who had seen the ship of State launched, and had been present at its construction, knew much better how to manage it than those who only inspected the work afterward, and were ignorant of the difficulties that attended its construction.

A MEMBER of the North Carolina Convention, which recently sat at Raleigh, gives this one: Among the members was one from an eastern county, who was continually going around behind the President's chair and striking off a peculiar kind of match, which could be heard through all the house. One of the membeas who was was speaking, becoming very much annoyed, stopped, and then said: "Mr. President, I move that the honorable gentleman from B— county be compelled to defer his Fourth of July celebration till next Christmas!"

DURING a series of wet days, a gentleman ventured to congratulate his umbrella maker. "Yes, that's all very well, sir," he replied; "but then there's nothing whatever doing in parasols."

An Honest Advertisement.

The Board of Health have just divulged the following advertisement of Mr. Bonner's country place in Westchester county, prepared by him and intended to be published last autumn, but withheld at the solicitation of his neighbors, who were afraid it might injure the value of property there. It was elicited by the Board of Health, in their official investigation of the ice pond matter at West Morrisania, and is a part of the evidence in that case:

"A COUNTRY SEAT FOR SALE WHERE THERE IS FEVER AND AGUE.—I hereby offer for sale my country residence at West Morrisania, near Melrose Station, where I have lived for the past three summers, but do not think I could much longer. I have heard that people looking for a place to purchase could never find one where they have chills and fever—they always have it about a mile, a mile and a half, or two miles off, but never right there, at the place that is for sale. Now, I offer for sale a curiosity, something rare, the precise, exact spot where the fever and ague is. I will warrant it to be there. Three of my children have it; my gardener has it; my groom has the sure premonitory symptoms, and I have a sufficient inkling of it myself. Any doctor, with a large family, who has a specific for fever and ague, would find this a most eligible situation; the neighborhood is full of the disease, and if he could keep it out of his own family, it would give him a reputation which would insure his fortune. Besides the fever and ague, the estate consists of a fine double house, with all modern conveniences and improvements, such as hot and cold water, furnace, range, etc., and about two acres of land, with a pretty fair barn, and some good box stalls for good horses. It is really a beautiful place. The grounds are handsomely laid out, and covered with trees and shrubbery of the choicest kind. These trees afford not only a delightful shade, but a nice harbor for mosquitoes. The mosquitoes thus far have not been so affected by the fever and ague as to prevent their biting. In fact, it is a good place for mosquitoes. I bought it to please my wife, and shall leave it to please my whole family. Terms, cash. I am afraid any security on it would get the fever and ague, and become shaky. Those wishing to purchase will please apply immediately. I want to get away from it as fast as 'Dexter' can carry me.

ROBERT BONNER.

"P. S. The town authorities have begun to make alterations in the street adjoining, and if they drain the place as well as they do the pockets of the landholders, it may become healthy."

We usually charge a pretty handsome price for the insertion of advertisements, but if Mr. Bonner has any more like this, we will agree to pay full Ledger rates for the privilege of publishing them.—[N. Y. Sun.

INITIATING A CANDIDATE INTO THE GOOD TEMPLARS.—The method of initiating a candidate into the Good Templars is but a slight improvement upon the same programme so long in vogue by the ancient and honorable fraternity of the "Sons of Malta." A chap who was taken from a lager beer saloon, where he got tight without knowing that lager would intoxicate, was put through a course of cold water treatment by the Good Templars a few evenings since. He peaches on the Templars, and gives the following expose of their initiation ceremony, for which, no doubt, he will be put through another course of cold water "sprouts" at the next meeting of the Lodge.

In the first place, the victim for initiation is blindfolded, bound hand and foot, and thrown into a cider press and pressed for five or ten minutes. This is done for the purpose of clearing his system of "old drinks." He is then taken out of the cider press and by means of a force-pump gorged with cistern water, after which a sealing plaster is put over his mouth, and he is rolled in a barrel four or five times across the room, the choir at the same time singing the cold water song.

He is now taken out of the barrel and hung up by the heels till the water runs out through his ears. He is then cut down and a beautiful young lady hands him a glass of cistern water. A cold water bath is then furnished him, after which he is showered with cistern water.

He is then made to read the water works acts ten times, drinking a glass of cistern water between each reading, after which the old oaken bucket is hung around his neck, and fifteen sisters with squirt guns deluge him with water. He is then forced to eat a peck of snow, while the brothers stick his ears full of icicles. He is then run through a clothes wringer, after which he is handed a glass of water by a young lady.

He is then gorged with cistern water, and his boots filled with the same, and he is laid away in a refrigerator for the space of half an hour; after which he is taken out and given a glass of cistern water, run through a clothes wringer, and becomes a Good Templar.

ACCORDING to the most reliable enumeration, there are in the world three thousand and sixty-four different languages. Of these, five hundred and eighty-seven are spoken in Europe, nine hundred and eighty-seven in Asia, two hundred and seventy-six in Africa, and one thousand two hundred and sixty-four in America. This enumeration includes many provincial eruptions of the same general language.

SMART CHILD.—"Ma, didn't the minister say last Sunday that the sparks flew upward?" "Yes, my dear; how came you to be thinking of it?" "Because yesterday I saw cousin Sally's spark stagger along the street and fall downward." "Here, Bridget, put this child to bed. She must be getting sleepy."

A BEATEN politician stated as the reason for his defeat in a debate, that his opponent happened to state just the only thing which he was not prepared to meet. "What was that?" inquired a friend. "The truth," was the reply; "nobody ever heard of a politician's telling the truth before."

A TRAVELING life insurance agent applied to a Texan to "take out a policy;" but the Texan replied, "a fellow's life is so confounded uncertain in this community, it ain't worth insuring."

The Nominations.

Before going to press we learn the joyful tidings now being proclaimed from the hill-tops, and thrilling through the hearts of a people struggling to be free from the despotic and corrupt rule of Radicalism. The telegraph announces the nomination of Horatio Seymour, for President, and Francis P. Blair, Jr., for Vice-President, by the National Democratic Convention. We hail the action of the Convention with joy and welcome. Millions of hearts beating high with the hope of a redeemed country, will rend the air with acclamations of joy and pledge that earnest, enthusiastic support of the ticket and platform that quails not before opposition, but insures glorious victory. In everything that relates to statesmanship and the nobility of mankind, Seymour and Blair are the superiors of their opponents. Their claims are based on the common cause of humanity, and unswerving devotion to the best interests of every section of the country. The deep gloom that has so long hung like a pall over the land, already seems to be clearing away, and through the bright dawn of better prospects the vision of a happy Union, with Seymour at the helm, sheds its golden luster in the pathway to a glorious reality which it foreshadows in the grand triumph of Democracy next November.

THE PLATFORM.—Everywhere, the sound doctrine of the Platform adopted by the National Democratic Convention is greeted by the hearty endorsement of the people. Unsparing in its denunciation of Radical usurpation, it declares the rights of the States in shaping their domestic relations. It provides for the honest and speedy payment of the public debt in a manner that no fair minded man can denounce. The taxes of a burdened people must be used for just purposes only, and be handled with the strictest economy. "When the Government obligations do not expressly state upon their face, or the law under which they were issued does not provide that they shall be paid in coin, they ought in right and justice to be paid in lawful money of the United States." The platform makes a distinct issue with Mongrelism It is just what the people want; just what is calculated to unite and harmonize Democracy, and insure victory in the cause of right.

BE UP AND DOING.—In the following sentiment of the Capital Reporter we heartily concur:

The salvation of our liberties, of free press, of free speech, and of our form of Government, depends upon the success of the Democratic party at the ensuing election, and each Democrat who fails in doing his share of work must, in case of failure, be condemned as indirectly aiding in the overthrow of all we hold sacred.

The time has come for earnest action. Victory is within the grasp of liberty-loving people. Let nothing be left undone that is calculated to advance the interests of Democracy and destroy the power of an unscrupulous enemy wedded to false gods and corrupt principles. Pass the word along the line and let no one falter. Organize, unite and win!

SICKLY SPIRIT.—The Record is grieved because the Black Republican press have well nigh exhausted their stock of vile epithets to apply to the Southern people, and lustily calls for a new vocabulary of billingsgate to be hurled upon a fallen foe. It despises magnanimity, scoffs at christianity, and displays its "sickly sentimentality" as follows:

"Then why should we, with so much sickly sentimentality, feign to forget the acts of those so recently engaged in rebellion against our Government. It is not for us to forget and forgive them. Let them apply to God Almighty for forgiveness."

CHOKED OFF.—Winans, who was selected by the Committee of Arrangements in San Francisco to deliver an oration on the Fourth, attempted to make use of the occasion for the purpose of advocating the rights of Sambo, politically, and the claims of Grant as a candidate for the Presidency. He was very properly hooted and hissed from the stand by an insulted and indignant audience when his harrangue was only half finished.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last, at Oakland, as a large number of people were going on board of the steam ferry, a portion of the wharf gave way and precipitated about one hundred persons into the bay. It is not known how many were drowned, but it is supposed the number of victims to the disaster is between twenty and thirty.

ORGANIZED.—A Democratic Club has been organized in the Second Ward, Sacramento. Fifty-six names were signed to the roll on the first night of meeting.

ORATION

Delivered at Woodland, July 4th, 1868, by Rev. T. H. B. Anderson.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: This day revives in every American heart, recollections of the past; in mind and feeling, we are carried back to the infancy of a Republic loved at home and honored abroad. I cannot address you without expressing gratitude to the God of Nations, for so signally preserving our existence, and granting us the privilege of meeting here under these grand old oaks to commemorate the 92nd anniversary of our independence. Our heart swells within us as we look around upon "fair women and brave men" who have left their homes to come here that they might acknowledge the Hand that has made for them such a glorious destiny.

Here are the old and decrepid, who, thinking perhaps it would be their last opportunity to hear the strains of music that once thrilled them with delight, have come to join you in the observance of the day rendered immortal by so many hallowed associations. God bless them! we would keep them to see an hundred such days, but we cannot. The wrinkled brow, the furrowed cheek, and the halting step, tell us that they are going. Heaven bless them with a smiling sun set, a pleasing night, and a glorious morn!

Here, too, are our mothers, who have watched over us many a long and dreary night; who taught us our alphabet, and to clasp our hands in the evening prayer; and who, perhaps, are remembering with a blush of lofty pride that they have sons they are ready to give, should the cause of liberty and the welfare of the Nation demand it. Wives of more than Roman virtue! Mothers of more than Spartan valor! We delight to do you honor; we gather around your arm-chair, and bow and worship in the sacred element that surrounds you!

Young gentlemen, we are glad to see you here. It becomes you, with strong propriety, to celebrate this day. Our fathers are looking to you as the hope of the country and future conservators of liberty. Your forms are erect; your eyes sparkle; and in your hearts, we trust, is the love of liberty protected by law. Rise above the little petty differences of the past; grasp each other's hand more affectionately; look out upon a great and growing country, and swear eternal hatred to everything that is against the best interests of our free institutions!

Young ladies, God bless you, we greet you! Along your pathway through life may the sweetest flowers bloom; may no cloud darken the background of your existence, and may a long perspective of coming happiness stretch before you. You have it in your power to soften the asperities of life; to nerve the arm that is feeble, and to give new life and courage to the prisoners of hope in whatever land they languish, or on whatever scaffold they are doomed to die. Here, under this California sky, the daughters of the hardy yeomanry of the land, the tillers of God's broad acres, are to live and rival in intellect and moral excellence the Miss Somervilles and Hannah Moores of precious memory.

Fellow Citizens: I appear before you, not as a partisan, not to disturb the peace and quiet of your community, but as a fellow-citizen, having at heart the welfare of your county, and the interests of the State. With feelings of pride I speak of this day, and trust that you have left your prejudices at home; have come to think of that noble army of martyrs, who counted not their own lives dear unto them that they might gain the liberties you and I enjoy.

Far back in the night of time, God said, "Be light, and light was." Then followed the creation of the heavens and the earth, and all the hosts of them. Ages rolled away; God had an oppressed people in Egypt; and for four hundred years they toiled, in the shadows of the pyramids, before their Deliverer came. One night the wail of death was heard all over the land; God appeared in their behalf; their chains were broken; and with a high hand and outreached arm they were brought to the Red Sea shore. This was another great event; and wherever the Jew wanders, upon the face of the earth, he points to it with pride.

Time moved on; the past was being forgotten; the future spread out a gay and happy scene, and all men began to expect another event that was deeply to affect the destiny of earth. Prophets lived, and longed and died; priests stood by the alters, and bards rolled from their sounding harps the coming glories of the royal reign of Heaven. The nations were stirred, as far north as the stormy Alps; west, to the fastnesses of Britton; east, to the Indus; and south, to where the bright waters of the Mediterranean flashed on a rock-bound shore—all were interested to know what was coming upon them. The world was like the stillness of a crowded court, where every heart palpitates, and every eye is strained to catch the pressure of coming royalty whose footsteps were heard on the threshold of the floor! The destined hour came; a "queenly star" hung on the brow of the sky; "wise men" from the east saw it, and the babe of Bethlehem was born. The birth of the Savior was an obscure event; yet wonders attended his bright career, encircled him at the grave, and heralded him home to the welcoming skies. Then humanity obtained new faith, new hopes, and new aspirations; then the sublime effigy of the cross struck its shadows along the pathway of ages, dissolving the mists of heathen philosophy—this was the great Easter day of the world!

The great political Easter day of the world is the Fourth of July; and as the former sent spiritual light to the farthest limits of mortal being, kindling an undying glory on the altars of primeval darkness, so the latter has arrested the gaze of all intelligences, who love liberty now and forever more. This day, then, becomes the great center, like the sun in mid heaven, around which the hardy sons of liberty gather, and on which they build their altars and offer up their devotions.

And as the Christian's Easter day sent its lines out into all the earth, so has this had its influence upon other, nations that sit in the regions of the shadow of death. Those tides of liberty that are circulating in Europe, that are threatening the subversion of every throne, shall work like the "leaven hid in the three measures of meal until the whole is leavened;" and civil and religious liberty, as found in America, shall be planted "from the eternal rigors of the Arctic to the islands of perpetual summer." This liberty shall take the wings of the morning. Every keel that ploughs the pathless deep between distant countries, and every wave that flashes on her galleys shall publish to the oppressed of the world the dawn of the jubilee. As the Christian's Easter day belongs alike to all, so does this. It is right and proper, then, that it should be ushered in with the shouts of the people, the flutterings of flags, the shrill notes of martial music, the booming of cannon, and salvos of artillery. We celebrate it in memory of him who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen;" of him who unfurled the stainless banner of freedom over three millions of people, and led them through the storm of battle for seven long years, winning from them the endearing appellation, "The Father of his Country!" Grand old hero! Your name shall be enshrined in the hearts of the people of this broad country, when the pyramids have crumbled and the stars have faded from heaven's high arch! We celebrate it in memory of the signers of the Declaration of Independence—the delegates of the thirteen United Colonies who met in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, and mutually pledged to each other their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to maintain those principles enunciated in that immortal document. We celebrate it in memory of those disinterested patriots of the Revolution who, in fancy's eye, are seen taking their stations on the Mount of Remembrance, who come to us from the embattled cliffs of Abraham, who start from the "heaving gods of Bunker Hill;" from the blazing lines of Saratoga and Yorktown, Brandywine and Valley Forge, and all the hard-fought fields of the war. We celebrate it in memory of the illustrious dead who fell in the war of 1812, from Lake Erie on the north to the Gulf of Mexico in the south.

We remember this day with grateful hearts; the dead who sleep tranquilly on the plains of the ancient Aztecs, who planted the starry old flag in triumph in the halls of the Montezumas. Their memories are like the odors of flowers fresh fallen.

"On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread."

We remember to-day with aching hearts the brave soldiers who fell in the late civil war that convulsed our beloved country. We shall not ramble over the graves of the fallen heroes of the South with unhallowed feet; we shall not hold them up to the scorn and contumely of the world; we shall not say they died in the "last ditch" defending treason. They were honest men; believed that their cause was just, and died facing the enemy's steel as bravely as the knights of the Middle Ages. They were simply mistaken as to their ability to carry out their views. They were too weak to cope single-handed with such a formidable foe; they only lacked power, not bravery, to make their cause a success; and now that they sleep beneath the soil on which they were born, and for which they fought so gallantly, let us throw around them the mantle of charity and love them for their virtues and their bravery! The soldiers of the North, too, were brave and chivalrous. They left their homes with willing hearts; they followed the flag of our country through the dust and din of battle until its broad stripes and bright stars rippled all the sky and flaunted its victorious folds over every parapet of war. And when we approach the last resting places of our dead soldiers, who fell North and South, let it not be to execrate their memories, nor to plant the cypress, but as a magnanimous people bring flowers—beautiful flowers—and pile them in heaps all over their graves.

"They have fought their last fight,—
Gained their last victory
And no sound can awake them to glory again."

Ladies and gentlemen, let me congratulate you that the war is over; that the clouds that palled upon our land have rifted; that the tempests have stilled; that the billows have been rocked to sleep, and that the star of peace once more sheds its radiance amid the tears of the retiring storm. How changed is now the scene from what it was a few years ago!

The foe is gone; the din of war is past; the signers of the Declaration are dead. Brave comrades in arms have "wrapped the drapery of their couch about them and laid down to pleasant dreams." Like the mildness, the serenity, the continuing benignity of a summer's day they have gone down with slow-descending, long-lingering, grateful light, and have left behind good omens to cheer us from the "bright track of their fiery cars!" I have said these men were dead, and in one sense of the word they are; but in another, they will live forever. As human beings they are no more. They are no more as in 1776 and 1861, bold and fearless advocates of liberty; no more the leaders of our States and armies. Some have monuments erected to perpetuate their fame; others sleep in the land of sun and flowers, with no marble to point the stranger to where they rest below; but to their country they still live in grateful remembrance. For such men there is neither exile nor oblivion. Their sunny graves are now, and shall be hereafter, a shrine toward which pilgrim feet travel, and where stranger hands place garlands of "memorial flowers." "Truly," said a great man, "there is justice in history." These men are now stars in our political firmament, by which we can steer our way over the pathless deep; or beacons of light to warn us of the rocks upon which the Ship of State may be wrecked. To-day they stoop from their lofty abodes to admonish us to be true to the liberties they have bequeathed; and I here pledge this audience (bear witness, Heaven) "that we will cling to that old flag" and the Constitution of our country "like the shipwrecked mariner to the last shattered plank in the wreck, though night and the tempest close around."

Fellow-Citizens: I have said we should remember the dead; the thousands of fresh graves that have been dug; and that baptism of suffering through which we have passed. Ought we to stop here? ought we not to think of the widow in her weeds; the want and penury that fill her lonely but; and the scores of orphans this "cruel war" has made? May Heaven encircle them in the arms of mercy! May God be the husband of the widow and Father of the fatherless! Let us also think of the oppressed of other lands. They are standing upon their native shores "looking to our coasts with wishful eyes." They see a land blessed with equal laws and happy men—a land, where the tree of liberty has struck deep its roots, and beneath whose umbrage the sons of freedom have built their alters, and sing their peans to the God of battles! To-day, let us remember down-trodden Poland, struggling Crete and brave old Ireland. For Poland, there is liberty; for Crete there is victory; and far o'er the cloudy walls of night, I see the "sunburst" of Ireland's glory rise. The blood of her Grattans, her Currans, and her Emmets cry for vengeance from the ground! This unnatural war in America has exiled some of our most gifted sons; and to-day, with sad hearts, they wander on foreign strands. Let it never be said of us that we have children abroad we dare not welcome home. Proclaim an amnesty; open the doors of the prisons; tell them that our flag is not an emblem of tyranny; that our Constitution protects the rights of all; that we welcome them back as fellow-citizens—here to live, and here to sleep with their forefathers.

But it is time to turn from sentiments, on which it is unavailing to dwell. The ninety-second anniversary of this all important day enjoins upon us new duties and obligations. The summary of rights set forth in the Declaration of Independence were without precedents in the history of men; it was a new regenerating era in the affairs of the world. Before this despots reigned; the will of the higher became the law of the subordinate, and the people were taxed without the right of representation. Before this the king of Great Britain refused his assent to laws that were wholesome; called together legislative bodies, distant from their public records; dissolved representative houses; endeavored to prevent the population of these States; obstructed the administration of justice; erected a multitude of new offices; kept among them a standing army in time of peace; attempted to subordinate the civil to the military power; cut off our trade with the world; deprived us of the benefit of a trial by jury, and compelled our fellow-citizens, who were taken captives on the high seas to bear arms against their country. To sustain those great principles of liberty, as set forth in the Declaration, the voice of Otis was heard in Fanueil Hall; Patrick Henry, whose heart of fire and tongue of flame had ever been in sympathy with liberty, appealed to the Virginians; the Sumpters of South Carolina took up the strain and bore it off to echo. Everywhere fathers were dying and mothers were weeping over them; the wife was binding up the gashed bosom of her husband; and the maiden was wiping the death damp from the brow of her lover. At last, the war-clouds parted; the olive branch came wafting through the gloom, the tide that had flowed through the ages, till it was fixed, turned the other way; the people became the master spirits; put the crown upon their own heads, not by usurpation, but by the sublime voice of law.

This new order of things was novel and eccentric; it required education, experience and statesmanship to adjust the parts of its intricate machinery. But the temple gradually arose, assuming grander proportions before the eyes of the world; though occasionally, the sound of the pick, ax and hammer has been heard; violent men have gone into it to burn strange fire upon its alters; storms have beaten against it, till every piece of timber has cracked; but still it stands like that lone column seen by Marius when wandering amid the ruins of Carthage, cloud-capped at its summit, the glory and admiration of the earth!

Since that day new States and Territories have been added; the different nations have contributed to our population, and the march of the new power has not been by miles, but by longitude and latitude. The circle of our influence is widening every day. It has marched from the hills of Maine to where Mount Shasta lifts its crested brow into the regions of eternal winter. No sun rises to track your heavens that does not gild some new trophy of our conquests—east, west, north and south—through all the zones of earth the midnight of oppression is struggling with the coming dawn. Everywhere over the mighty expanse of outspreading nations light is gleaming and flashing through the firmament of mind, giving direction to the hopes and shedding its radiance upon the path of humanity. It is sending its sonorous voices across the seas, louder than their surges and stronger than their mightiest tempests, to arouse and guide other nations into the same rights and privileges that we enjoy. Thus it shall continue to go till the earth is redeemed and disenthralled—till

"War drums beat no longer, and battle flags are furled,
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

Let me congratulate you that the union of these States is perfect. Having a common Constitution, they stand as equals upon it; and that when the sun arose this morning lighting up the gates of the east, it shone upon a confederacy of States, linked together by indissoluble bands, from Maine to where rolls the Oregon and thunders the Sacramento. We are thank God, one and inseparable. No mountains are so high, no rivers are so long, no deserts are so arid as to divide us; and the duties we owe to our sister States are plain. Let us cherish a spirit of love and fraternal feeling; let us provoke each other to good works; let us strengthen the bands that bind us together; and let this Union, with all the rights of the States unimpaired, descend the track of ages and be forever famed and ever loved. Cursed be he who invades this temple to mutilate its furniture, to deface its ornaments, or tear down its pillars. For him no "minstrel raptures swell, but, dying, he shall go down to the grave unwept, unhonored and unsung."

The permanency of republican institutions depend upon the virtue and intelligence of the people. If we forget God and the old landmarks made by our forefathers; if we go after other gods, then may expect the judgements of Heaven to come on a thousand shafts to lay us low! We are therefore admonished from the sepulchers of nations from the holy cause of truth and man—from the eloquent ruins of ages not to quench this light that is rising on the world. Greece cries to us by the convulsed lips of her dying Demosthenes; Rome pleads with us by her Tullys; and history records the fact that no nation ever lost its liberties and regained them again. Yes, my friends such is the exhortation to all, to exert our powers, to employ our time to consecrate our labors in the cause of our native land, or true vital liberty will take its flight to heaven from whence it came.

I am proud of our liberties and of our country; and see before her a grander destiny than was ever dreamed of by her greatest statesmen! I am proud of her armies and navies; and at the sight of them, I am glad that I am an American citizen. The blood that has been poured upon our soil, the vicissitudes through which she has passed, has endeared her to me. Other affections of my heart may change with time and place; they all have more or less of selfishness in them. But the love I bear for my country has an expansiveness, an absorbing power at the sight of her flag, never to be found or known elsewhere. This feeling of love for country and kind is no new thing; it has lived in verse and swelled in lofty canto, in all ages of heathen and christian literature.

Have I not reasons to be proud? The extent of her territory is surprising. From the Atlantic to the Pacific; from Key West to where the aurora borealis hangs its vail of light, she stretches her arms. And her progress in the arts and sciences is still more surprising. Since Harvard was erected on the Eastern shores of our continent, like the orb of day, she has thrown many a cheering ray into the dark corners of our country, warming everything into life. Instead of being shut in, her benign influence is felt all over the land; already her empire extends beyond Alexander's. On almost every hill-tops are churches, school-houses, colleges and seats of learning; and yet we are in our infancy. Greece boasted of being the most learned people; philosophy had its retreat in Athens; and the forum shook with the eloquence of her sons. But her literature did not posses an elastic principle. Her arts were chained to her coasts; they did not penetrate the interior. The language of Athens was unknown to the north of Pindus, and Thrace whose mountain-tops may almost be seen from the dome of Minerva, was the abode of barbarism. How different the picture in America! Our common-school system provides for the education of every child, however humble its walks in life, and no one is responsible if it fails to receive it but the parent that bore it. Our literature is expansive; it penetrates the heart; and is diffusing itself over land and sea, hastening the day when all shall be of one faith and one language. The United States is, and has been, the birth-place of heroes and statesmen, poets and orators, camp and courts; the material is here.

The magnetic telegraph, the wonder of the age, is an American institution. The electricity that floats in the storm-cloud, that leaps with blinding blaze, that fires forests and splinters masts, has been brought down and sent along the wirey throughfare, carrying the news and intelligence of the day. In a few months, I trust, your rural village shall clasp magnetic hands with New York, Philadelphia and Washington city; and by the submarine cable, which lies far below the bed where the "sea monster sleeps," we, as a nation, have been interlocked in fraternal brotherhood with the kingdoms of the Old World. American genius has imparted new life to the world. Wherever we travel crooked paths are made straight, rough places are made smooth, and through the bowels of the earth and on the bottom of the seas we send our thoughts, outstripping the eagle on its wing.

We have tested, too, the power of steam. The flying locomotive has shouldered the tonnage of the seas and borne it away into the heart of the country. Railroads cross each other at right angles, like lines on the chess-board, all over the nation, facilitating the march of mind and the progress of civilization. It was predicted by the prophet that in these latter days many should run to and fro, and knowledge should be increased. We stand to-day not far from the great Central Pacific Railroad, the longest and highest on the globe, and which will in a few months bring us within six days' travel of the dear old homes beyond the mountains. When this road is completed and the locomotive with its tramp of thunder and breath of fire rolls over mountains and deserts of more than two thousand miles, our golden State, the noblest of the sisterhood, will be belted to the Union with bands of iron.

A word more and we are done. Our own State claims our praise. Young, is she? Yes; but beautiful. There is not a peak, nor crest, nor cascade from "Yosemite's Bridal Vail," to the placid Occident that is not beautiful. Her mountains are rich with gold, silver and precious stones; trees that pierced the blue vault of heaven long before Solomon reigned or Osmandys built his monumental piles, stand like noble sentinels on her brow; and her valleys are like the "Garden of the Lord, as thou comest into Egypt by way of Zoar." Her cities have sprung into existence like magic, and will become the great commercial marts of the world. The wealth of nations will be poured into her lap, and our products shall be carried to the islands of the seas and continents that dot the face of creation.

Only let us cherish her liberties; let us guard well her interests, and how great her future shall be I dare not predict. Long may she stand on the shores of this Western World; and long may that flag float above her that waves so proudly over us to-day.

TOWN AND COUNTY MATTERS.

THE CELEBRATION.—The Fourth of July, 1868, will long be remembered by the citizens of Yolo county. As often as that anniversary is called to mind it will awaken most welcome emotions in hearts responsive to the thrill of patriotism, heard in the glad shouts of the people, and seen sparkling in their eyes on that occasion, as when

"The God of Battles smil'd—justice triumph'd;
The Stars and Stripes, Columbia's sacred flag,
Like eagles' pinions flutter'd to the breeze;
And the Red Lion, haughty Britain's emblem,
Discomfited, went howling back with rage,
To lair amidst the white cliffs of Albion."

Notice had been given that the Democratic clubs of the county would unite in giving a grand barbecue, in which everybody was invited to participate, and that usual appropriate exercises would be observed, and, although it was feared that the busy season of harvest would prevent many from attending, ample preparations were made by the Committee of Arrangements to accommodate a large number. At daylight the impatient gunners were at their post, and the roar of the cannon heard many miles away, like the clanging of the old bell of Independence Hall, aroused the people to welcome the birthday of liberty. Early in the forenoon the crowd began to gather; by scores and hundreds they came from every direction, literally filling up the streets, and presenting a scene of life and gayety, surpassing anything of the kind ever before witnessed in the county. The procession formed on Court Block, and, headed by an excellent band of martial music, presented a grand appearance; and, while lengthening out its long line of march to the grove of grand old oak trees west of town, there seemed to be no limit to the enthusiasm of the multitude, who gave expression to their feelings in joyful acclamations and patriotic songs. One very interesting feature of the procession was a group of beautifully draped little girls, each decorated with national colors and representing a State of the Union. They contributed their share in enlivening the line of march by the music of their voices in song, and were greeted with many cheers. Having arrived on the ground, the immense crowd gathered around the speaker's stand to listen to the exercises announced for the occasion. The exercises were opened with prayer by Elder J. N. Pendegast, who, in Christian eloquence, appealed to the bright Source of all for His blessing to be with the assemblage on that day. The prayer of the good man was answered; no accident occurred to mar the ceremony; no sorrow came to blight a happy heart. The reading of the Declaration of Independence having followed prayer, the Rev. T. H. B. Anderson, of Sacramento, was introduced to the audience as the chosen orator of the day. His oration, abounding in beautiful thought and generous sentiment, so free from the bigotry and selfishness of partizanship, and full of devotion to the whole country, was received by his hearers with marked unanimity of their approbation. The crowd, spell-bound by the eloquence of the speaker, seemed at times inspired by enthusiasm too deep for utterance. Their eyes were moistened with glistening tears when reference was made to the good old time when all loved the Constitution and the Union; and finally, at the close of the oration—which was regarded as the happy triumph of the day—cheer after cheer arose from a multitude of voices, while old and young congratulated each other as if it were but yesterday the event had transpired which they were then so joyously celebrating. When the exercises were concluded at the stand, the President of the Day invited the audience to repair to the tables near at hand and partake of the hospitalities generously provided by the various Clubs of the county for their welcome guests. The events of the day, in every particular, were so agreeable that all seemed loth to leave the grounds, and it was not until a late hour in the afternoon that the procession was re-formed and marched back to the starting point, where parting cheers greeted each delegation as it wheeled out of line to return home.

CONTEMPTIBLE ACT.—On the night of the Fourth a number of cowardly blackguards, whose low instincts make them strangers to magnanimity, run off the canon used by the Democratic Clubs in firing salutes in honor of the anniversary, and threw it down an embankment, dismounting it from the carriage. Such acts of partizan malice are deserving the contempt of respectable men in all parties, and most certainly are not calculated to redeem the worthless character of the guilty, either as individuals or partizans. Try some other employment, vagabonds, and await your political doom with more manhood.

FUNERAL.—The funeral of M. T. C. Baker on Sunday last was the largest ever witnessed in Woodland. He was well known and respected by many friends for his social and generous disposition. Being conscious several days beforehand that death awaited him, he made preparations to meet his fate calmly and with full reliance in the Christian hope of immortality. He was buried in the cemetery near Union Church. The funeral services were conducted by Elder J. N. Pendegast in the presence of a large audience, among whom were many of young Baker's former schoolmates, who seemed deeply affected by the solemnity of the occasion.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM HEAVY LOSS.—Another case of carelessness in the use of matches came near causing the destruction by fire of the crops of G. W. Pierce, on Putah Creek, last Saturday. Matches dropped in his meadow became ignited by the heat of the sun and set fire to the grass. The flames spread with rapidity, and were only prevented from devouring the adjoining grain fields by the almost superhuman efforts of the neighbors, who finally succeeded in subduing the devouring element.

FIRE.—We learn that the barn and sixty or seventy tons of hay belonging to T. C. Hoppin, on Cache Creek, two miles above Cacheville, were destroyed by fire on last Sunday morning. A number of fine horses were rescued from the flames by parties who discovered the fire in time to save them. Damage $1,500 or $2,000; no insurance. The fire is said to have originated through the carelessness of harvesters in dropping matches in the hay where they had been sleeping.

RACES AT KNIGHT'S LANDING.—An exciting race is anticipated on the Knight's Landing course to-day. Five horses have been entered, named as follows: Abe, Lantern, Ben Butler, May Queen and Flying Gib, to go in harness, mile heats best two in three. The track is said to be in fine condition.

BEAUTIFUL FLAG.—The flag carried by the Davisville delegation in the procession on the Fourth was one of the largest and finest in the country, its dimensions being about 25 by 18 feet. This beautiful flag was one of the prominent features in the line of march on the return home from the barbecue.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—The Board met on July 6th, and continued in session three days. Petition received and placed on file asking for the alteration of road commencing at Margaret and Fifth streets, in the town of Washington—running south to Reed & Cummings; road viewers appointed to view on the 27th day of July and report on the 10th day of August. Ordered that the boundary lines of West Grafton Road District be changed as prayed for by petitioners; same in regard to West Grafton Election District. Ordered that the several Roadmasters of Yolo county be authorized to require the services of the County Surveyor in establishing the location of public roads where doubt exists in regard to said location. Proposals of J. W. Tilley to build a bridge one and a half miles north of Putah Creek for the sum of $337 75; also, to build a bridge two and a half miles west of Cacheville for $284 50—accepted. Ordered that the boundary line between North and South Putah Election Districts be changed as prayed for by petitioners; same in regard to boundary line of North and South Putah Road Districts. Daniel Hoffman appointed Justice of the Peace in Grafton Township to fill vacancy occasioned by the resignation of A. Sias. Ordered that the street commencing at the northeast corner of Campbell's stable in the town of Cacheville, and running westerly to the residence of Dr. Dobbins, be opened as a public highway. Rates of toll established on Putah Canon Road—Wagon and six animals, $1 50; wagon and four animals, $1; wagon and two animals, 75 cents; wagon and one animal, 50 cents; horseman, 25 cents; loose horses and cattle, 10 cents; loose hogs and sheep, 5 cents. Petitions in favor of and remonstrance against the remission of extra liquor license received and placed on file, and further consideration of the subject deferred until the next meeting of the Board. Ordered that J. I. Underhill, County Surveyor, proceed immediately to have bridges at Cacheville and Nelson's on Cache Creek repaired. Ordered that the boundary line between Grafton and Cottonwood Townships be altered as prayed for by petitioners. Ordered that Cottonwood Township be divided into two Election Districts, to be known as East Cottonwood and West Cottonwood Election Districts, with boundaries as prayed for. Ordered that a new road district be established in Cottonwood Township, to be known as East Cottonwood Road District.

RATIFICATION MEETINGS.—A grand ratification meeting was held last night at Knight's Landing. Another will be held at Davisville to-night. The Woodland ratification meeting is announced for the 20th inst.

NORRIS GUN.—The old "Norris Cannon," about which there has been so much controversy for several years past, has been placed by proper authority in the possession of Thos. H. Washington.

"COULDN'T GET THE RIGHT FLOP."—The great flying machine, extensively advertised to make an ascension in San Francisco on the Fourth, proved a humbug, and the disgusted spectators who paid their money for the show gave the manager a ducking in the Bay.

FAILED IN THE ATTEMPT.—Two men attempted to commit suicide at Sacramento, one on Monday and the other on Tuesday, by jumping into the river. They were both rescued by spectators.

KEEP YOUR PROMISES.—Julia A. C. Kennedy has brought suit against Chas. F. McDermott, in a San Francisco court, for breach of promise. She claims damages to the amount of $100,000.

ARRESTED.—The murderer of Dr. Gray, of Marysville, was arrested on Sunday night. He attempted to escape after being caught and was shot in the arm by one of his captors.

THE NEW

WEED

SEWING MACHINE!

Just completed, in SOLID STEEL MACHINERY, and combining in ONE the good of ALL!

This most enterprising Company has certainly brought out

THE BEST SEWING MACHINE EVER MADE!

And indeed is the ONLY NEW Sewing Machine, of any name, manufactured for the last eight years. Even a superficial observer can easily see that it surpasses all others, at least in the simplicity and durability of its machinery, and its remarkable

EASE OF MOTION AND MANAGEMENT.

It has few pieces, and all of steel. It makes the complete "Lock Stitch," the same on both sides, which will not ravel. Every Machine is warranted to sew from and of course can never be got out of order by "hard sewing." ☞ All repairs free of charge. Prices same as others.

PLEASE NOTICE.

The claims of the Florence Company for the First Premium at the great Paris Exposition of 1867, though seeming true in letter, is really false in spirit and intent, and calculated greatly to deceive the public. Although it did receive the Silver Medal—that being the highest award given—it was not awarded the FIRST RANK! This was awarded the Weed Sewing Machine, and to the WEED only, as being "first in the order of merit." The second place was given to an European Machine, and only the third to the Florence! But the claim of the Wheeler & Wilson Company, at this Fair, is a great outrage, both as to letter and spirit; at least so much of it as pertains to their Gold Medal upon their Family Machine, which, to speak plain, is purely imaginary, they having received—as is well known—their Gold Medal on their "Button-hole Machine," but nothing at all on their "Family Machine;" not even a bronze medal, nor indeed (what is worse) even an "honorable mention." (See official report.) See also, as to the new WEED Sewing Machine, the returns of the State Fairs of Pennsylvania, Illinois, New Hampshire and New York, for 1867, at each of which the NEW WEED "F. F." Sewing Machine was pronounced the BEST, and received the highest premium given. And so also at other Fairs, and indeed wherever the Company shall choose to exhibit the "strong points" of this really magnificent Machine.

Summons.

IN the District Court of the Sixth Judicial District, of the State of California, in and for the county of Yolo. JAMES MOORE, Plaintiff; vs. C. W. LEWIS, Defendant. Action brought in the District Court of the Sixth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Yolo, and the complaint filed in said county of Yolo, in the office of the Clerk of said District Court.

The People of the State of California send greeting to C. W. Lewis, defendant: You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the District Court of the Sixth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Yolo, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days, (exclusive of the day of service,) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this District, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint. The said action is brought to recover judgment for the sum of five hundred dollars, with legal interest from the dates mentioned in the complaint, alleged to be due and owing said plaintiff upon a contract for furnishing and delivery of water for irrigating and other purposes, set forth in an agreement or contract executed by defendant on the 11th of July, 1863.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment for the amount demanded.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Sixth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Yolo, this 5th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight.

HELMBOLD'S BUCHU.

The only Known Remedy

—FOR—

Diabetes, Irritation of the Neck of the Bladder, Inflamation of the Kidneys, Catarrh of the Bladder, &c., &c., &c.

For these diseases, it is truly a sovereign remedy, and too much cannot be said in its praise. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms. Are you troubled with that disgusting pain in the small of the back and through the hips? A teaspoonful a day of Helmbold's Buchu will relieve you.

Physicians and Others

PLEASE NOTICE.

I make no secret of ingredients. Helmbold's Extract Buchu is composed of Buchu, Cubebs and Juniper Berries, selected with care, prepared in vacuo and according to the rules of Pharmacy and Chemistry.

These ingredients are known as the most valuable Diuretics afforded. A Diuretic is that which acts upon the Kidneys. Helmbold's Extract Buchu acts gently. It is pleasant in taste and odor, free from all injurious properties, and immediate in its action. For the satisfaction of all, see Medical Properties contained in Dispensatory of the United States, of which the following is a correct copy:

"BUCHU. Its odor is strong, diffusive and somewhat aromatic, its taste bitterish, and analogous to that of mint. It is given chiefly in complaints of the Urinary Organs, such as Gravel, chronic catarrh of the Bladder, morbid irritation of the Bladder and Uretha, diseases of the Prostrate, and Retention or Incontinence of Urine, from a loss of tone in the parts concerned in its evacuation. It has also been recommended in Dyspepsia, chronic Rheumatism, cutaneous affections and Dropsy."

For further information see Professor Dewees' valuable works on the Practice of Physic. See remarks made by the celebrated Dr. Physic, of Philadelphia. See any and all standard works on Medicine.

Dr. Keyser is a physician of over thirty years' experience, and a graduate of the Jefferson Medical college and of the University of Medicine and Surgery of Philadelphia:

Mr. H. T. HELMBOLD—Dear Sir: In regard to the question asked me as to my opinion about Buchu, I would say that I have used and sold the article in various forms for the past thirty years. I do not think there is any form or preparation of it I have not used or known to be used, in the various diseases where such medicate agent would be indicated. You are aware, as well as myself, that it has been extensively employed in the various diseases of the bladder and kidneys; and the reputation it has acquired, in my judgment, is warranted by the facts. I have seen and used, as before stated, every form of Buchu—the powdered leaves, the simple decoction, tincture fluid extracts; and I am not cognizant of any preparation of that plant at all equal to yours. Eighteen years' experience ought, I think, to give me the right to judge of its merits, and without prejudice or partiality I give yours precedence over all others. I value your Buchu for its effects on patients. I have cured with it, and seen cured with it, more diseases of the bladder and kidneys than I have ever seen cured with any other Buchu, or any other proprietory compound of whatever name. Respectfully yours, etc.,

GEO. H. KEYSER, M. D., 140 Wood st.

FROM THE LARGEST MANUFACTURING CHEMIST IN THE WORLD.

I am acquainted with H. T. Helmbold; he occupies the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise. WM. WEIGHTMAN, (firm of Powers & Weightman), Manufacturing chemists, Ninth and Brown streets, Phila.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are genuine preparations, and knowing that the intelligent refrain from using anything pertaining to Quackery, or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self-styled doctors, who are too ignorant to read a physicians' simplest prescription, much less competent to prepare Pharmaceutical preparations. These parties resort to various means of effecting sales, such as copying parts of advertisements of popular remedies and finishing with certificates. The science of medicine stands simple, pure and majestic, having fact for its basis, induction for its pillar, truth alone for its capital.

A Word of Caution.

Health is most important; and the afflicted should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, or until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.

YOLO COUNTY DEMOCRAT.

Old Grimes Ain't Dead.

Old Grimes ain't dead; that good old man,
We oft shall see him more;
He did not fear the rabid clan,
Nor quail at their uproar.

His heart is open as the day,
His feelings all are true,
Although he didn't vote the way
Ben Butler wished him to.

For when he heard the "uncorked" spout,
Disgust within him burned;
Old Grimes knew what he was about,
And from such counsels turned.

Kind words he had for all,
But nary vote for Wade;
Fearless he stood in Senate hall—
Old Grimes was not afraid.

He lives in peace with all mankind;
To justice he is true,
And they who threaten Grimes will find
That threats with him won't do.

Unharmed the rage which Thaddeus rent,
He passed securely o'er;
Old Grimes stands bravely in his boots
Upon the Senate floor.

That good old man has stood the test,
And wears the just man's crown;
The howling Rads may let him rest,
They'll never pull him down.

At ease the old man, smiling, sits,
Without a fear or doubt;
He gave the "11th high crime" the fits,
That played impeachment out.

A BISHOP who was fond shooting, in one of his excursions met with a friend's gamekeeper, whom he sharply reproved for inattention to his religious duties, exhorting him strenuously to "go to church and read his Bible." The keeper, in an angry mood, responded, "Why, I do read my Bible, sir; but I don't find in it any mention of Apostles going a-shooting." "No my good man, you are right," said the bishop; "the shooting was very bad in Palestine, so they went fishing instead."

LITTLE do the rich and great think that perhaps with every thread of the gay habiliments which they wear, is interwoven the sigh of a human soul; and that in the delicacies which surround them, are spent the life's energies and the vitality of exhausted frames, which have nerves that feel and suffer.

A CLERGYMAN, after preaching a tedious sermon on happiness, during which he enumerated the various classes of happy persons, asked one of his elders what he thought of the discourse. "You omitted one large class of the happy," replied the elder, "and that is they who escaped your sermon."

"I WISH you would give me that ring on your finger," said a village dandy to a country girl, "for it resembles the duration of my love for you—it has no end."
"Excuse me, sir," she said, "I choose to keep it, for it is like my love for you—it has no beginning."

A TOAST.—In celebrating Franklin's birthday at Buffalo, the printers had "a good time," and among others the following toast was drank: "Printers' wives—May they always have plenty of SMALL CAPS for the heads of their little original articles."

"MA," said the pride of a family, who had seen seven summers, "do you know why our Tom cat is like a poet?" Ma didn't. "Why," said the precious pet, "doesn't he go out moonlight nights, and invoke the mews?"

FALSE HAPPINESS is like false money; it passes for the time as well as the true, and serves some ordinary occasion; but when it is brought to the touch, we find the lightness and allow, and feel the loss.

A PRIEST asked a tipsy fellow, leaning against a fence, where he expected to go if he died. "If I can't get along any better than now, I shan't go nowhere."

IT is suggested that if the Fenians intend to kill off the Royal family of England, they will have an endless task, at the present rate of increase.

BEAUTIFUL was the reply of a venerable man to the question whether he was still in the land of the living: "No, but I'm almost there."

THE Chinese think telegraph wires are the railroad tracks of little demons, and they do not choose to facilitate the passage of such spirits; they tear the lines down.

"PA," said a little friend of ours, "what's the use of giving our little pigs so much milk? They make hogs of themselves.' Pa walked away.

A YOUNG LADY, whose father is improving the family mansion, insists upon having a beau-window put in for her benefit.

"I NEVER was ruined but twice," said a wit, "once when I lost a lawsuit, and once when I gained one."

A BORE—the man who persists in talking about himself when you wish to talk about yourself.

IF you want to see a pretty tolerable specimen of vanity, consult—your own looking-glass.

THERE never was a hypocrite so disguised, but he had yet some mark or other to be known by.

A TRULY great man borrows no lustre from splendid ancestry.

HE who fishes in the waters of matrimony may fish with the naked hook, if the hook is gold.

THE only tolerated murderers are the lady-killers.

THE question of the hour—"What o'clock is it?"

THE best exercise of memory—Remember the poor.
